Objectives of the Seminar:

The term “Open Educational Resources” was coined in 2002 at the UNESCO Forum on the Impact of Open Courseware for Higher Education in Developing Countries. It refers to all types of research and educational resources used for learning and teaching that are in the public domain with a copyleft or copyright under open license allowing free use and in principle re-purposing to the own need of users. They are wholly or partially accessible free of charge, anywhere and anytime, through ICT for non-commercial purposes OERs include Open Access (OA) research and data basis, videos, podcasts, lectures, corrected exercises, free homework help, textbooks, books, journals, dictionaries, and free software with customization options. In practice ‘open content’ also called ‘open source’ is a copyrightable work that is licensed for free with or without commercial restrictions and creating derivatives. This seminar explores the current OER landscape looks at some of these issues are being addressed and highlights opportunities presented by OER.
