About the Seminar: The Consumer Protection Act of 1986 was passed to safeguard customers' rights, but as time went on, it became clear that the Act didn't cover issues like product liability, consumer contracts made with service providers or the manufacturers or the e-commerce industry. In order to fill the gaps in the Act of 1986, Parliament passes The Consumer Protection Act in 2019 which aims to provide a more comprehensive and robust mechanism to safeguard and strengthen the interests of consumers. The primary objective of the seminar was to spread awareness on the consumer rights and how consumers can be benefitted from these laws.
